A Brief History of the West Avenue Annex

By Charlie Alison

Editor's Note: The University of Arkansas is considering renovation of the West Avenue Annex, so a little history of the building seemed in order.

In the early 1920s, Ely & Walker Dry Goods Co. of St. Louis began opening new garment factories in Missouri and Arkansas. In early 1923, the Fayetteville Chamber of Commerce was notified that it was one of several cities being considered for a new manufacturing plant. A letter from the company's vice president, C.M. Lawson, informed the chamber that the company requested the city to secure a factory and provide a deed for it to the company when the company's payroll reached 20 times the anticipated price of a suitable building, the latter estimated at $25,000 to $30,000.[1]

Frank Ely and David Davis Walker founded Ely & Walker 40 years earlier at St. Louis as a wholesaler of dry goods, and the company became an immediate success, supplying retailers across western frontier. During the late 19th century, the company began manufacturing a variety of clothing, expanding its operations during the 20th century, including this push during the 1920s to expand manufacturing into Arkansas.

On Dec. 1, 1923, B.F. Campbell, Bruce Holcomb, J.F. Moore, J.S. Bates and E.C. Robertson, acting as a "Citizens Committee" on behalf of the citizens of Fayetteville to negotiate a contract with Ely & Walker. The Citizens Committee was fostered by the Chamber of Commerce for the purpose of promoting industry and giving employment through this particular project and possibly future ones.

The Citizens Committee intended to pay for construction of a building that could be offered to Ely & Walker, and they would pay for it through subscription by Fayetteville citizens.[2]

FAYETTEVILLE DAILY DEMOCRAT

The Fayetteville Daily Democrat ran a photo of a similar Ely & Walker manufacturing plant erected in Kensett, Missouri, very similar in size to the one eventually built in Fayetteville.

By the middle of December, the committee reported having nearly $9,000 available for work on the proposed garment factory with the remainder of pledges expected in three payments due on April 1, 1924; April 1, 1925; and Dec. 1, 1925.[3]

In January of 1924, an editorial of sorts appeared in the Fayetteville Daily Democrat referencing an already-open factory in Kennett, Missouri, that employed 200 girls and women, paying an average weekly salary between $12 and $15 per worker:

> "The factory is NOT assured for Fayetteville. It can be had providing Fayetteville meets certain obligations. Make it a point to investigate thoroughly before you act. It means more money and a better city to get the factory here, and it means economic salvation for Fayetteville's needy."[4]

The editorial included a picture of the Kensett plant, similar in style to what was eventually built in Fayetteville.

Actual payments must have lagged, though, because the committee turned to the Fayetteville Water Improvement District No. 1 to help pay for the remainder of construction of the building.

A contract was signed on March 10, 1924, between the Citizens' Committee and Ely & Walker Dry Goods, which also appointed J.C. White and Noah F. Drake of Fayetteville to be trustees for the property and proposed building.

Under the agreement, the committee was to pay for a building 80 feet wide and 150 feet deep on a lot at what is now the address of 346 N. West Ave. The lot was later described as:

> "A part of Lot 3 in Bock 6 in County Court Addition to the City of Fayetteville aforesaid, more particularly described as follows: Beginning at the northwest corner of said Lot 3, Block 6 and running thence south 80 feet; thence 150 feet; thence north 80 feet; thence west 150 feet to the place of beginning. Also a strip of land lying immediately west of the above describe tract which strip is of an equal and uniform width of four and four-tenths (4.40) feet from east to west and eighty (80) feet from north to south. Also a strip of land equal and uniform width of four and four-tenths (4.40) feet from east to west and one hundred and eighteen and one-fourth (118.25) feet from north to south which strip lies immediately west of a tract which is described as follows: A part of Lots 3 and 4 in Block 6 in County Court Addition to the City of Fayetteville, Arkansas, described as follows: Beginning at a point which is 407.56 feet East and 852.77 feet South of the Northwest corner of the Northwest Quarter of the Northeast Quarter of Section 16, Township 16 North, Range 30 West, which point is the Northwest corner of said Lot 4 and the Southwest corner of lot 3, in Block 6, County Court Addition to the City of Fayetteville, and running thence South 4.75 feet, thence East 168 feet, thence North 118.25 feet, thence West 168 feet to the East side of West Street, thence South 113.50 feet or to the point of beginning."[5]

The factory would be built of brick with three stories at the street but only two stories at the rear because of the rise of the hillside. The cost was not to exceed $35,000. The Citizen's Committee also agreed to supply Ely & Walker with "a sufficient number of competent female operators to receive reasonable wages," with 150 operators over the age of 16 considered the minimum number. When the operations of Ely & Walker Dry Goods reached $700,000 in labor and help, the Citizen's Committee would convey the building and property to Ely & Walker.[6]

By the fall, construction was well underway. Frank Moore, chair of the factory committee of the Chamber of Commerce, reported that 16 railroad cars of material had been delivered and "that the Ely Walker Garment factory building is proceeding rapidly."[7]

Ely & Walker opened a shirt manufacturing plant before the end of the year, managed by Charles F. Emde. He and his wife lived on North Park Avenue.[8]

Under the contract, the company would eventually take possession of the building if it met its obligations for payroll. In 1934, though, general economic conditions during the Great Depression "made it impossible for the company to carry out to a final conclusion the provisions" of the contract, and it forfeited any claim it had to the building and surrendered the building back to the Citizens Committee.[9]

The city acquired the building in 1936 for $7,673.50.

By the end of the decade, another manufacturing company, the Central Canners Inc., moved into the building. Central Canners canned food, primarily tomatoes, and sold canning equipment.

One floor, though, was used for the Coon's Roller Rink, managed by Ira B. Coon, who lived a couple of blocks away on Watson Street. The rink advertised itself as "the healthful exercise and pure fun that provides a very enjoyable evening." The owner invited spectators to come as well, especially parents. The roller rink continued in operation through about 1945, although it's location might have moved out of the "garment building" at some point.[10]

Oberman Manufacturing began renting the building in 1944, manufacturing men's clothing. The company paid $150 per month rent, half of which went to the city and the other half went into an improvement fund. By 1949, the company employed slightly under 300 people and estimated its payrolls had totaled $2 million during the first five years. Also that year, an organization called the Industrial Foundation, made up of 99 Fayetteville firms and individuals, proposed that the city sell the building to the foundation for $10,000 and that the foundation would then purchase the lot to the south and double the size of the building.

Oberman would amortize the cost over 15 years:

> "It is proposed that the foundation purchase the structure, buy the lot adjoining on the south, and expand the building so that Oberman may double the number of people employed in Fayetteville and increase its payroll about 100 per cent."[11]

Instead, the city deeded its share of the building to the Fayetteville Chamber of Commerce, which also purchased the lot to the south and signed a 10-year lease with Oberman amid plans to expand the garment building. This expansion never happened though.

The next year, Eula Hight and her daughter, Betty Hight Hannah, provided a driveway along one edge of the manufacturing plant to the Fayetteville Chamber of Commerce.

In 1950, the building saw tragedy. Elmer Edgar Allis, the 69-year-old night watchman, died of a heart attack while patrolling the second floor of the building in 1950.[12]

The superintendent for Oberman Manufacturing's plant in Fayetteville during this period was Arthur J. Nunnelly, who lived out Old Wire Road.

In 1954, Fayetteville workers at Oberman Manufacturing were making 82.5 cents per hour, and they voted to join the Amalgamated

Clothing Workers of America-AFL, negotiating a 5-cent increase in their wages. Union votes on at least two earlier occasions had failed, and the union organizers blamed coercion by the Oberman company and the Fayetteville Chamber of Commerce for the earlier votes.[13] Three years after the successful vote for unionization, Oberman Manufacturing and the Chamber of Commerce mutually withdrew from their lease.[14]

The city, on behalf of the Fayetteville Water Improvement District No. 1, issued a quitclaim deed and turned any rights it had in the property over to the Chamber of Commerce for $1 on Aug. 12, 1957.[15]

By the same method and price, the Chamber of Commerce then transferred the building to the Board of Trustees of the University of Arkansas for $1 with a proviso that if the property ceases to be used by the university, title reverts to the chamber or its successors.[16]

The University of Arkansas General Extension Division, the precursor to the university's Division of Continuing Education, moved into the building as the first of a long line of university departments that used the building as home of the next 60 years.

By 1964, the Fayetteville Planning Division used part of the building as well, staying for about a decade but moving to the Fayetteville City Administration Building after it was renovated in the 1970s. By 1978, the university's Division of Community Affairs and the Rehabilitation Research and Training Center joined the Division of Continuing Education in the building. In the early 1980s, the Division of Continuing Education moved to its then-new center on the Fayetteville Square, and the Arkansas Archeological Survey moved into the building.

Make a Gift That Gives Back to You

You can leave a legacy for the Washington County Historical Society and secure a guaranteed income stream during your lifetime. How? Through a charitable gift annunity at Arkansas Community Foundation.

A charitable gift annuity is a contract between you and Arkansas Community Foundation. Under the arrangement, you transfer assets to the Foundation in exchange for a commitment from the Foundation to pay you a fixed sum for the remainder of your lifetime. After your death, the remaining principal and income is retained by the Foundation and used to support the programs of the Washington County Historical Society.

Current Rates (subject to change)
Individuals Ages	Rate	Couples Ages	Rate
65	4.7%	Husband 65, Wife 60	4.0%
70	5.1%	Husband 70, Wife 65	4.4%
75	5.8%	Husband 75, Wife 70	5.8%
80	6.8%	Husband 80, Wife 75	5.3%

Rates are for illustration purposes only. The Arkansas Community Foundation will design a gift annuity to benefit you and the Washington County Historical Society.

Through a charitable gift annuity, you can increase your retirement income, postpone capital gains tax and receive an income tax deduction, all while making plans for a significant legacy gift to your community. Find out how you can support the Washington County Historical Society through a charitable gift annuity.
